MEDICINAL.

No Whiskey!

Brown's Iron Bitters is one of the very few tonic medicines that are not composed mostly of alcohol or whiskey, thus becoming a fruitful source of intemperance by promoting a desire for rum.

Brown's Iron Bitters is guaranteed to be a nonintoxicating stimulant, and it will, in nearly every case, take the place of all liquor. and at the same time absolutely kill the desire for whiskey and other intoxicating beverages.

Rev. G. W. RICE, editor of the American Christian Review, says of Brown's Iron Bitters:

> Cin., O., Nov. 16, 1881. Gents:—The foolish wast-ing of vital force in business, pleasure, and vicious indulgence of our people, makes your preparation a necessity; and if applied, will save hundreds who resort to saloons for temporary recuperation.

Brown's Iron Bitters has been thoroughly tested for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, weakness, debility, overwork, rheumatism, neuralgia, consumption, liver complaints, kidney troubles, &c., and it never fails to render speedy and permanent relief.

A Living Skeleton's Death. Martin P. Avery, who as a living skeleton has been one of the curiosities at Bunnell's Broadway Museum, died last evening. He was about 46 years old, and was a native of Chenango county, New York. In early life he was a grocer in a town near his native place, and continued that business successfully until his health failed about years ago. He was a man of small stature, being little more than five feet in height, and his weight was formerly about 115 pounds. When his health began to fail he complained of dyspepsia. The small amount of food he could retain did not appear to be properly assimilated and he rapidly lost fiesh. He wore a full sandy beard and moustache, and with his deep sunken cheeks and fair complexion was more deathlike and cadaverous in appearance than most living skeletons.

Dr. Franklin Smith, of No. 182 Grand st.,
who attended him, said last evening: "1 was called to see Avery on Saturday even-ing and found him suffering great pain in the epigastric region. He has suffered frequently from these painful dyspeptic attacks but he appears to have usually treated himself, as I found opium and bismuth powders by his side. He told me that he had been treated many times for his dyspepsia. He said he had lived on milk exclusively for many years, but during Friday and Saturday he had not been able to retain that even in year, small quantities. His behit even in very small quantities. His habit was to take a few spoonfuls of milk at short was to take a few spoonfuls of milk at short intervals. He complained that for two or three days past he had not been able to get good milk, but that was probably a notion on his part due to depraved taste, the sign of the attack of dyspepsia which followed, for there had been no ascertainable change in the milk fumiched him and he was in the milk furnished him, and he was given the best that could be got. I gave him pepsine and bismuth and finally had to severe reaction of that drug, but he insisted Miller, trustee, John Kehoe, trustee, Alfred on having it. I gave him only about two grains altogether. This pulse had fallen to 100 and he seemed much improved. During the afternoon he said that he wanted to be taken to the New York Hospital, and it was arranged to have him sent there this evening, but he died before the ambulance arrived. His disease was, in my opinion, due to a failure of the pancreatic secretion or an entire obliteration of the thoracic duct, or both. There was, at any rate, no bowel digestion. No fatty matter was absorbed into the system, and the result was slow starvation. There were no evidences of consumption. His weight at the time of his death was about forty-five pounds. Avery did not suffer from the heat and when I went to him Saturday evening he had thick flaunels on. Heat had to be supplied to bim altogether externally. His room was on the corner of Broardway and Ninth street, on the third story. It was an airy, comfortable room, neatly furnished. He preferred not to live with the other human curiosities. He talked to-day about his life and showed that he had an unim paired memory and rather a bright intellect. He appeared to have much interest in himself as a curiosity. It was his business, and the only thing he seemed to have any enthusiasm about was himself as a professional skeleton. I tried to get him to take a spoonful of brandy occasionally with his milk, but he refused, saying that he had frequenty tried that, but it did him no good. He took no stimulants, nor did he use tobacco, and I found that he was in no sense of the term addicted to the use of opium."-New, York World.

DIPHTHERIA-LOOK TO YOUR CELLARS. Many cases of diphtheria are known to arise from undue dampness of cellars. The importance of a careful examination of his premises should not be overlooked by any really practical considerate man. A writer in the Boston Journal of Chemistry thus speaks of this matter:

"Diphtheria, typhoid and scarlet fever, and many other serious illnesses, have their origin in cellars, both in the city and country, and we can do our readers no greater service than to urge them to see that, at all times, they are in dry, sweet, wholesome condi-
